was conducted by: Arunditi Xantus, Samantha B. Saltz and Jon A. Shaw of University of Miami School of Medicine, Miami, USA from Jan 21,2015 to April 29,2015.

The research article on this website is based on the participants aged from 10 years to 17. There were total of 51 participant of which 24 reported some form of cyber-bullying.

The research found out the most common form of cyber-bullying in teenager is through facebook .However, the researchers also add that technology-based bullying either through internet-based application or cellular phones is growing rapidly and has received growing amount of attentions over the year.

The article also says that internet-based application and cellular phone exposes teenagers to different unwanted and violent topics and sites and unwanted sexual exposer including images and video which is likely to effect the mentality of a teenager.

There are different topics in the article beside cyber-bullying they are:

- Depression

2.Observation

The bus station I chose for this research was lygten.at first when I started observing there only a girl about 20 she was just using her mobile after a few minutes a other people joined her including lady with her baby,unlike other people using mobile she wasn't using her instead she was playing with her baby and again few other people arrived I guess there were about 9 or 10 people. There was also a guy with his daughter, I think he picked her up from the school they were talking to each other. There was this lady who talked to someone on her phone the whole time I was there. I think there were people of mostly from 20-30 age group and some children of 2-3 yrs old .

It was windy and rainy and most of the people I think were heading home.No one was talking to each other .

One thing I noticed was that people without children were frequently busy in mobile phones while those with children focused their attention toward their children.

Then the bus arrived,no one got off the bus because there weren't many people in it,.

All the people got into the bus and I did too and I got off in the next station(skjold plads station).when I got off there were few waiting for the bus about 2 or 3 and they using mobile too.the whole time I was at the bus the same people I was observing before were doing the same thing that they did while waiting for the bus .

3.Interview

I decided to interview two of my class mates,first I chose my topic and prepared some question and started the interview.

First of all is started with the introduction,telling him what the interview was about and then I started asking questions.

I choose to ask about his hobby and interests. His main hobby is cycling, I started my question asking him whats his hobby, his answer was he had many hobbies but among them cycling was the thing he did often and he like cycling through forests and take some pictures of nature.

After these I continued asking him, I asked what if its raining and you can go cycling?

He said in that case he would sit at his home and watch music videos also he added he loves to read books especially about the history of Denmark and Vikings, he really seemed to be interested in Nordic cultures.

So after this I asked him beside these hobby what other things are you interested in?

He said he was interested in cooking food and it helps him to feel relaxed, he added he likes to cook for his friends and he prefers cooking food from Guetemala.
